Friday, October 16th, 2020 | 13:30 CET, online

The Food Security Center invites you to attend the World Food Day Colloquium 2020.

This year, the World Food Day Colloquium will address the challenges and opportunities in our agricultural and food systems, answering questions on how different crises affect food security, how they evolve the industry and what is to be done to ensure a fully sustainable food value-chain throughout difficult times.

Through a Young Investigators panel discussion, the World Food Day Colloquium will also offer a unique opportunity for young scientists to give insights into their research, opening up the dialogue on new perspectives related to food security.
